GRACE

SERVE

Introduction:

Serving with Singular Devotion: Matthew 6:24

The profound concept of service is illuminated in Matthew 6:24, where Jesus imparts his wisdom on the inability to serve two masters simultaneously. He underscores that one's devotion will inevitably sway towards one, while the other is despised. This maxim holds an undeniable truth – we cannot serve both God and Mammon. The grace to serve presents us with a singular vision, a divine focus that aligns our hearts with a higher purpose.

Embracing Singular Devotion:

The foundational teaching from Matthew 6:24 emanates from Jesus Himself. "No one can serve two masters," He declares, emphasizing that our loyalty is singular. We find ourselves either devoted to one or distant from the other. This principle is not merely a philosophical discourse; it's a profound lesson on commitment. As we navigate life's intricate pathways, the grace to serve grants us clarity, anchoring our focus on the sacred service we undertake.

The Singular Vision of the Apostle Paul:

We find a living embodiment of this principle in the life of the Apostle Paul. His transformative journey reflects the essence of wholehearted service. Embracing the grace to serve, Paul described himself as a "bond servant of Jesus Christ" in Romans 1:1. He recognized that serving God meant wholehearted devotion, regardless of titles or positions.

The Dynamics of Grace and Service:

Within the tapestry of service lies a myriad of gifts bestowed by God. In 1 Corinthians 12:28, Paul delineates apostles, prophets, teachers, healers, administrators, and more as these divine gifts. The grace to serve is not restricted to grand roles; it extends to every corner of our lives. Whether within the church or beyond, our acts of service manifest God's grace and contribute to His divine agenda.

Illuminating the Vision:

Yet, the essence of service extends beyond human agendas. As we serve, we partake in realizing God's Kingdom on Earth. Our service represents a pathway for His light to infuse every aspect of life, from the mundane to the miraculous. Romans 12:6-8 resonates as a testament to the diverse gifts that facilitate the divine vision. Whether through prophecy, ministry, teaching, exhortation, giving, leadership, or acts of mercy, each serves to magnify God's glory.

Embracing the Vision:

The embrace of this vision comes with an inherent mark of distinction. 1 Peter 4:10 encapsulates the transformative power of serving, emphasizing that our gifts are entrusted to us to be stewards of God's grace. The grace to serve not only empowers us but also illuminates the divine calling within our lives.

Service as a Statement of Dominion:

When we serve, we participate in a larger narrative — one that transcends our individual stories. The vision God has for the world extends through us, turning our gifts and talents into vessels of His divine agenda. Our offerings, whether as singers, administrators, or in various capacities, carry an intrinsic statement of dominion, affirming God's influence over our lives.

The Dual Nature of Anointing

The anointing is a duality – comprising two major facets: the extent of our suffering and the depth of our service. This distinction is profound. Firstly, the measure of our suffering often determines the extent of our anointing. Secondly, the depth of our service, akin to the time and dedication we offer, equally influences the anointing we receive. This symbiotic relationship defines our spiritual journey.

The Unseen Bonds of Service

In comprehending the benefits of serving God, we can draw parallels with the bonds formed in intimate relationships. Just as in a romantic connection, where part of our partner resides within us and vice versa, our service to God establishes a profound spiritual connection. This bond is not limited by space or time; it endures and evolves, enriching our souls and reflecting the divine presence within us.

Liberating Ourselves from Soul Ties

Breaking free from soul ties – those lingering connections from our past – is an arduous task. Sinful actions can result in continuous repercussions, like recurring dreams or emotional struggles, as a consequence of the "wages of sin." These spiritual debts can persist, impacting our lives until we acknowledge and address them. Through abiding by God's commandments, we begin the process of healing, gradually releasing these burdens from our souls.

The Dynamics of God's Service

Serving God is comparable to any form of service, whether in a professional setting or in relationships. Just as in romantic affairs, where intimacy deepens over time, dedication to God cultivates a unique spiritual authority. This authority becomes a beacon of divine influence, echoing the concept of "whoever you bless, is blessed; whoever you curse, is cursed." This power strengthens as we steadfastly serve, a testament to the transformative nature of our commitment.

Humility and Grace

Amid the journey of service, humility is a recurring theme. As greatness becomes our portion, we're reminded that humility is the cornerstone of exaltation. Jesus' words in Mark 23:11-12 emphasize the role of humility in achieving greatness. This sentiment echoes throughout history, underscoring that the path to true success is paved with humility and the acknowledgment of a higher power.

Transformation into Flames of Purpose

Serving God ignites a transformation within us, comparable to being forged into a flame of fire. This metamorphosis, echoed in Psalms 104:4, symbolizes a passionate commitment to a higher purpose. The flame of purpose, kindled through service, empowers us to become agents of change and inspiration in our communities, allowing God's grace to shine through our actions.

Legacy of Favor

Service to God is not only a personal endeavor; it resonates through generations. Just as Joshua 24:15 advocates for households choosing to serve the Lord, our commitment ripples across time, shaping the destiny of our descendants. This service creates a favorable legacy, intertwining our present actions with future blessings.

Nurturing Seed for Generations

Our service to God nurtures a seed of transformation that spans generations. This seed, sown in dedication and humility, grows into a tree of abundance. As we utilize what we have – time, talents, and resources – to serve, we are fostering a legacy that future generations can reap, embodying the spirit of Mark 4:25.

The Reward of Zeal and Dedication

The culmination of our service manifests in God's reward. The biblical account of Esther's uncle, Mordecai, illustrates this beautifully. Our service acts as a memorial before God, much like the offerings and alms that Cornelius made. The zeal and dedication we infuse into our service create a lasting legacy that stands as a testament to our commitment.

Embracing the Joy of Service

An essential aspect of serving God is the joy it brings. Our service should evoke joy, an inner contentment arising from the desire to please the Divine. This joy, distinct and genuine, is a litmus test that validates our alignment with God's will.

The Sustaining Fire of Service

As the journey unfolds, it's paramount to guard against pride and vanity. Intentional humility safeguards us from the allure of pride. The grace we receive should be channeled into a lifelong pursuit of self-awareness and self-correction.

The End Product: A Life of Purpose

Ultimately, the grace of service leads us to a life of purpose and fulfillment. Our commitment to God's service propels us to shape a world characterized by love, humility, and dedication. Through each act of service, we contribute to a legacy that spans generations, guiding those who follow us towards a meaningful connection with the divine.

In conclusion, the journey of service to God is transformative and multifaceted. It blends humility, dedication, and joy, forming an unbreakable bond between us and the divine. By embracing this path, we not only enrich our own lives but also pave the way for a legacy of favor and purpose that transcends time. So, let us take up the mantle of service, kindled by the zeal to please the Divine, and forge a path of profound impact for ourselves and generations to come.

FOLLOWING FATHER'S EXAMPLE A Joyful 'toon by Mike Waters

Follow God's example, therefore, as dearly loved children and walk in the way of love, just as Christ loved us and gave himself up for us as a fragrant offering and sacrifice to God.

EPHESIANS 5:1-2 NIV

Introduction

In the journey of unraveling the essence of grace, we delve into Hebrews 28 and 29, where the profound concept of grace is expounded upon. This discourse aims to provide a comprehensive understanding of grace to serve and its transformative role in our lives. In the pursuit of a life aligned with the will of God, many find inspiration in the words of Jesus Christ. In First Chronicles chapter 18, verse 6, Christ's message about serving resonates deeply, guiding believers towards a life of purpose and dedication.

Defining Grace

At the heart of our exploration lies a quest to define grace. Grace, simply put, is being aided by God. It's the divine assistance that enables us to achieve what would be otherwise unattainable. This divine help is the real work of grace, manifesting in various aspects of our lives. It is the embodiment of God's support in our earthly existence.

Grace: The Divine Help Directly from God

A pivotal facet of grace is the divine help it bestows upon us. This help, a manifestation of grace, empowers us to overcome challenges and achieve feats beyond our natural capabilities. Just as Second Chronicles 26 reveals, seeking God's guidance led to prosperity. Grace is the vehicle that carries us through the storms, helping us cry out in battle and receive divine intervention.

Grace for the Weak

Throughout scriptures, grace is unveiled as the elixir for the weak and the helpless. The Apostle Paul's message in 2 Corinthians 12:9 resonates deeply – "My grace is sufficient for you, for my power is made perfect in weakness." This grace strengthens the vulnerable, turning their weakness into strength and enabling them to triumph in the face of adversity.

Grace's Role in Accomplishment

The story of Uzziah in 2 Chronicles 26 and Paul's testimony in 1 Corinthians 15:10 both emphasize the role of grace in accomplishments. Uzziah's prosperity stemmed from his seeking of God, underscoring that achievements are by grace. Paul acknowledges his success as a result of God's grace, an essential reminder that all progress is intricately linked to the divine assistance.

Grace as Currency

Analogous to currency, grace is bestowed upon us to be spent and utilized. Just as money in our account is meant to be spent, grace is the currency that empowers us to labor more abundantly and surpass our natural limitations. Paul's declaration that he labored by the grace of God resonates, as he acknowledged that he achieved through the currency of grace.

Grace Empowers Divine Fulfillment

Deuteronomy 30:9 reinforces the idea that grace empowers divine fulfillment. God's promise to make us abound in the work of our hands, the fruit of our labor, and all aspects of our lives is a testament to grace's transformative power. This divine help ensures our success, as God's grace toward us is never in vain.

The Foundation of Service

At the heart of Christ's teachings lies the concept of service. In his own words, Jesus emphasized that he came not to be served, but to serve (Mark 10:45). This sentiment underscores the importance of selflessness and humility as essential virtues for anyone seeking to follow in the footsteps of our Lord. Christ's life itself was a testament to his unwavering commitment to serving humanity.

The Shift in Ownership

A pivotal prerequisite for embracing a life of service is the realization that our lives no longer belong solely to us. This truth resonates with the statement that Jesus gave his life as a ransom for many (Mark 10:45). When we choose the path of service, we surrender our autonomy to the higher purpose of serving others and, ultimately, serving God. Our lives become a conduit through which His love and compassion flow.

Understanding the Authority of the Lord

The word "Lord" carries a weighty significance, reflecting the authority and ownership that God claims over His creation. This authority is central to the understanding of the call to serve. The term "Lord" signifies ownership, reminding us that we are His and His alone. The directive to serve emanates from His authority, compelling us to align ourselves with His divine purpose.

The Paradox of Sacrifice and Glory

The call to serve is characterized by the paradox of sacrifice and glory. Jesus' example demonstrates that enduring suffering and shame are integral to the journey of service. The decision to serve often brings with it the persecution of peers and the ridicule of society. Yet, it is precisely through this suffering that the glory of God's purpose shines forth. Just as Christ saw the glory beyond the cross, believers too should fix their gaze on the ultimate reward that awaits.

The Role of Grace

Embarking on the path of service requires divine grace. Grace empowers believers to transcend their own limitations and fears, allowing them to serve wholeheartedly and without reservation. This grace not only enables individuals to overcome the discomfort and challenges associated with service, but also ignites an inner fire—a burning desire to fulfill God's purpose regardless of the obstacles.

The Inner Compelling Force

Service is fueled by an inner compelling force, a divine burden that propels believers forward. This force motivates individuals to step out of their comfort zones and address the needs of others with unwavering dedication. Just as Mother Teresa was moved to care for abandoned children despite the suffering it entailed, believers must be driven by an unyielding passion for service.

Conclusion

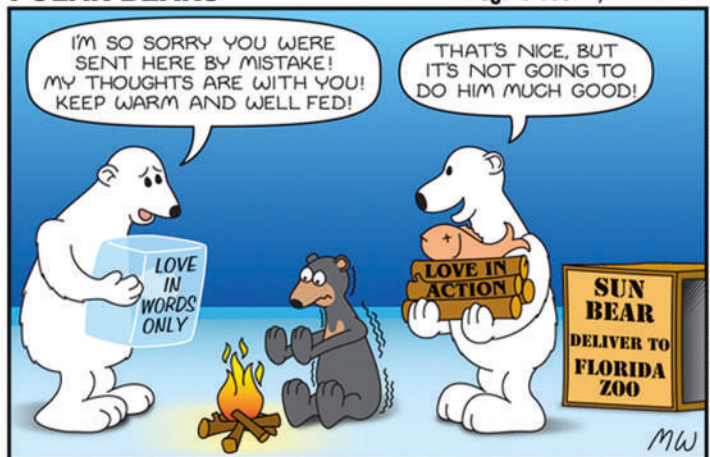

The call to serve is a sacred endeavor that beckons believers to step beyond themselves and into the realm of God's purpose. To heed this call is to surrender one's life to the higher authority, to endure the discomfort of persecution, and to embrace a life of sacrifice. Grace empowers believers to carry out this mission, granting them the strength to overcome challenges and the conviction to serve with fervor.

As we navigate the complexities of modern society, let us remember the profound words of Jesus—to serve, not to be served. May we draw inspiration from his example, fueled by the grace that empowers us to transcend fear and discomfort. In this, we find our true purpose and contribute to the betterment of humanity in the name of our Lord and Savior.

YOUR MISSION IN THE MARKETPLACE by Rick Ezell

Scriptures: Matthew 5:13-16

Introduction

When Jesus entered our world, he didn't box himself inside the four walls of the synagogue. He walked into the lives of sinners. He touched the lepers. He associated with prostitutes. He dined with heathen. He scandalized the religious community by penetrating the world.

In order for Jesus to reach and rescue the world he had to penetrate it. Likewise, for us to impact and influence the world for Christ we must penetrate it. John Stott said, "We are to go as he went, to penetrate human society, to mix with unbelievers and fraternize with sinners. Does not one of the church's greatest failures lie here? We have disengaged too much. We have become a withdrawn community. We have become aloof instead of alongside."

On Sunday the church gathers, but on Monday through Saturday the church scatters. Into the marketplace followers of Jesus Christ live as God's ambassadors. They are his representatives, his messengers. They are on mission.

R.C. Sproul described the mission to the marketplace.

Jesus' strategy always involved believers going into the world, to penetrate the marketplace. Followers of Christ must recognize their ministry and mission of communicating God's love to people they come into contact each day.

I. The biblical mandate

It was this intentional mission strategy that Jesus had in mind when he said, "You are the salt of the earth. But if the salt should lose its taste, how can it be made salty? It's no longer good for anything but to be thrown out and trampled on by men. You are the light of the world. A city situated on a hill cannot be hidden. No one lights a lamp and puts it under a basket, but rather on a lampstand, and it gives light for all who are in the house. In the same way, let your light shine before men, so that they may see your good works and give glory to your Father in heaven" (Matt. 5:13-16).

Imagine Jesus standing on a quiet hillside by the Sea of Galilee speaking quietly to a small band of earnest followers. Then picture, if you will, the marketplace today. Can you conceive of two more contrasting scenes? Yet even today, in the marketplace of a noisy and hectic world, these words find their mark. I am constantly amazed that words that gripped the hearts of first-century believers can still strike responsive chords in the hearts of men and women today. Let me highlight three ideas illustrated in Jesus' imagery of light that have direct bearing on our experiences in the marketplace.

1. Radiate Christ's love

Jesus made it absolutely clear that he wants his followers to radiate his love to those around them. That's why he talked about light. A tiny tungsten filament charged with electrical energy naturally radiates light and dispels darkness. It has no choice. We can't turn a light on and then tell it not to dispel darkness. The very nature of light is such that it must shatter the darkness around it. In the same way, true Christians should, by their very nature, radiate something of the work of God in their lives to the people around them. We are the light of the world; we must, therefore, radiate that light and dispel darkness.

2. Don't refuse to shine

Jesus anticipated that some believers might choose to limit their candlepower, to refuse to shine their lights. He knew that they would feel safer securely hidden "under a bowl" (or in a stained glass sanctuary), where they could bask in their anonymity and escape the accountability associated with "going public" with their faith. He anticipated this and forbade it. "Let your light shine!" he commanded. He did not, and he does not now leave believers the option of letting their worlds remain in undisturbed blackness.

3. Spread Christ's influence

Jesus made it obvious that he wants us to spread his influence to every corner of this dark, fallen world. It's not enough that we simply take our lights out of hiding. He wants us to put them on a lamp stand where everyone can see them! God wants the light of his love to be held high so it can permeate every bit of darkness.

How long will it take for us to realize that we are his agents of light? It is through the channels of our daily lives that God shines the light of his message of love.

How do we become agents of light? How do we penetrate the marketplace? How can we bring glory to God and touch the lives of the people we meet in a positive life-changing way?

II. The practical steps

The following practical steps can be implemented to communicate and model the love of Christ when you step outside the walls of the sanctuary and into your workplace.

1. Take on the 'unseen' Partner

Live as the psalmist who wrote, "I keep the LORD in mind always. Because He is at my right hand, I will not be shaken" (Psa. 16:8). Before you go to work, take time to pray about your job. Pray for the people you'll be working with and those who you'll be serving. Remember, God is the "unseen Partner" in all of life. He is with us wherever we are. And we need his presence, especially in the marketplace.

Think about the meaning of these words from the 13th-century writer Meister Eckhart: "The kind of work we do does not make us holy, but we make it holy. . . . As we have the divine being within, we bless each task we do, be it eating or sleeping or watching, or any other task."

Keith Miller, a businessman and author, decided to take the "unseen Partner" with him to work. Consciously he decided he would take Christ's presence with him throughout the day at the office. To remind himself of the divine being within, he prayed every time he walked to and from the drinking fountain. As he walked through the offices and spoke to people, he prayed for them. As a piece of paper came across his desk, he committed it to God. He said he noticed no outward change in his attitude, but some of the love and concern he had for these people must have communicated itself to them. People began to come to him to talk about their inner lives.

Being conscious of God's presence can have a profound impact on your job, and the people around you.

2. Transform your attitude

Work like the apostle Paul who wrote, "And whatever you do, in word or in deed, do everything in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through Him" (Col. 3:17). At your work, whatever it may be, have an attitude that reflects the positive nature of God's grace on your life.

Many jobs are boring. The marketplace is often a maze of nameless people. Sometimes good employees don't get recognized and promoted. The woes of layoffs and the threats of mergers and downsizing can be discouraging. But in the midst of less desirable circumstances attitude can transform a boring, thankless job into a Christian ministry.

When Gordon MacDonald pastored Trinity Baptist Church in New York City, he would ride the same bus daily from his home to the church. One day the bus driver complained to MacDonald: "You've got it a lot better than me. You have an interesting job and travel different places. I just drive this bus up and down the same streets everyday."

MacDonald told the bus driver his job could be a Christian ministry too. "Everyday, when you first get on this bus, before anyone else gets on, dedicate that bus to God for that day. Declare it to be a sanctuary for God for that day. Consecrate it to God's glory, and then act like it is a place where God dwells."

Several weeks later MacDonald returned from a trip and saw the bus driver. "You've transformed my life," the man exclaimed. "I've been doing what you said every day, and it has made me see my job in an entirely new perspective."

The same transformation could happen to you in your work if you would take the time to adjust your attitude each day.

3. Realize your job is your mission field

The apostle Paul reminds us, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel, because it is God's power for salvation to everyone who believes, first to the Jew, and also to the Greek" (Rom. 1:16). "Why should I be ashamed of the gospel?" asks Paul. "It is the message of salvation, of life! It's powerful! It's the answer to man's greatest need!" And guess what? People in the marketplace are in the largest mission field in the world. You rub shoulders everyday with people who need the power and grace of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Sylvia and Don Hill had the Shoe Shine concession at the old Eastern terminal at Boston's Logan Airport. While getting shoes shined many people would share their lives with Don and Sylvia. They would share the joy and the pain. As people shared their stories, Sylvia and Don would pray, witness, and minister as they felt directed by God's Spirit. Often people would write of stop by and thank them for listening and ministering to them.

As Sylvia was washing down the stand one night, a man watched in amazement as she so carefully washed and closed the stand. He approached Sylvia and acknowledged that he had been watching her and asked her how at the close of such a busy she could do such a good job in taking care of the stand. "I have to," she said. "It is God's stand!"

Mark Duke while serving as a personnel manager for Sprint Telephone, along with his supervisor, was directed to help 300 low producing sales persons start producing or else. They tried everything by using all the classic motivational approaches. Nothing worked! Mark and his supervisor discovered they were both Christians. They said, "We've tried everything, so why don't we pray." They prayed and God led them through a redemptive process in which they helped those struggling 300 employees with their personal problems. Sensitively and ethically they shared Christ with them. That year they exceed their sales quota.

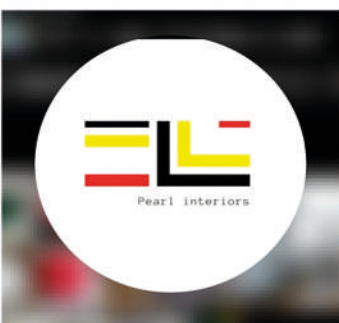

Tony Ponceti is the owner of a very successful printing business in Miami. His attitude is that God given him daily orders and he simply follows them. He believes in the "theology of interruption." If he senses the Spirit leading him to minister in a certain way, he will adjust his business agenda to get in on God's agenda. When Hurricane Andrew devastated Miami, Tony became absorbed in the needs of thousand of hurricane victims. He shared food with the hungry, found shelter for the homeless, and medical aid for those suffering everything from minor to major illnesses. As he administered humanitarian aid, he would pray for the hurting and share Christ with them. When Andrew struck Miami, God interrupted Tony's printing business agenda and gave him a ministry agenda of helping storm victims find relief and then to find Christ.

Conclusion

What can you do in your work setting to minister and witness to those around you? Let me encourage you to make an impact list. List the people with whom you work that you will pray for. And begin praying for them each day. Begin each day by consecrating your work place. Dedicate it as a sanctuary to God. Make it a holy place where God is present and God can work. And, then, each day look for opportunities to minister, to serve, to help, to offer assistance. We may not be able to do everything, but we can do something.
